Lard in the Senate. The Senate Committee on Agriculture has been called to meet late this after noon. It will consider the Conger Lard bill. Senator Paddock, chairman of the committee, says he will not attempt to substitute for the Conger bill his Pure Food bill in committee. He does not propose to give occasion to any talk by taking that course. After the House bill is reported the Senate can substitate his bill for it if a majority so de-

This is the Judge's last day on the bench, and Attorney Jordan asked that a 15-yearold boy who had been committed to the workhouse for an assault upon a grown man be released. "It was a school-boy affair, just as you and I passed through years ago, your Honor, but we were not arrested in those days for these petty offenses." Pritishuno, Sept. 6 - A number of the richest corporations in the country have formed an alliance against strikes. Among the corporations which are members of the combination are the Westinghouse system, both in this city and elsewhere; the Yale Lock Company, Celt Arms Company, and four or five other big factories in Connecticut and presumably the Pullman interests.

The compact agreed to is, that in case a strike corus to enforce an unreasonable demand, whatever the strike be against one or all of the associated facterries, all work is to cease. LOUISVILLE, Kv., Sept. 6 .- Workmen employed by the Louisville and Jefferson Bridge Company in laying fracks, supposed to be for the use of the Big Four Railroad, over the right of way owned by the bridge company, in this city, were assaulted last night by a mob of workmen employed at the Dennis Long Pipe Works, who believed the tracks would be laid across them to be a scrap of paper on the Long's property. A desperate fight en-sued and a number of the participants were injured, one of them, named John Kelly, being fatally hurt. A large force of police finally quelled the riot, and the track-laying was resumed. The Vanderbilt lines will be extended to his city upon completion of the new

The Greatest Heresy.

Professor John Strart Blackie in the September Forum. Creeds no doubt must be, in religion as to everything else where reasonable action is demanded from a reasonable being; but the great danger in theology is the substitution of an intellectual for a moral assent; and, again, the impertia moral assent; and, again, no imperio-nent attempt to bring the attributes, qualities and operations of the Infinite under catergories suitable only for the measurement of the finite. Certain it is that of all the herosics that have brought jar into the moral music of the Christian church, the greatest is the concelt of a self-constituted orthodoxy which damns a modest brother for not believing what only the pride of an unchastened intellect could have as-

FROM ACROSS THE SEA.

London, Sept. 6.-The election of Mr. Charles Funwick, M. P., as secretary of the Parliamentary labor committee by the Liverpool Trades Union Congress Is considered a wise move. The morning papers generally commend it as likely to improve the character of the work dove by the committee. The scene in the congress when Mr. Broadburst, who had held the secretaryship for fifteen years, made his farewell address was a touching one. A sensation has been caused among trades union men by the result of the prosecution of President Inwood of the Bootmakers' Union, on a charge of attempting to influence the manager of a factory at Daventry to join the striking employer of the estabshment. Inwood was convicted and

A BLUE-GRASS IDYL.

Concerning Two Kentucky Gentlemen Who Dined at "Del's", From the New York Times-

A blue grass fdyl has been circulating through the southern society for several days. It is a tale of two Kentuckians, one a major, the other a colonel, who after a night of luck at power determined to gratify an oft-expressed desire to visit New York. They came, and after two days of sightsceing the colonel suggested to the major that a trip to New York would not be complete with out a dinner at Delmonico's. The major agreed.

It was deemed that it would hardly be considerate to take Mr. Deimonico unawares, and in order to prepare him for so unusual an event as a swell din-ner for two the Kentucky gentlemen went to the restaurant early in the day, called for the head waiter and told him what they wanted. "Spare no exof the improvements now in progress.

They dined at six. It was a splendid dinner. They tasted wines of all kinds that they had never heard of before. They are a great deal and drank a great deal, and told each other stories that both anew by heart. The banquet lasted three hours.

They called for their bill. The waiter placed a check, face down, on the menu. The gentlemen were togsting each other gone. They saw what appeared to them to be a scrap of paper on the mean and brushed it off. The old fellows were ignorant of the customs of French restaurants, and they conclude: that the menu must be the bill. The colonel began to figure up the prices. It seemed that they had eaten a great deal, but the names of dishes were in a language unknown to them, and any way they were not in a mood to bother about trifles.

about trifles.

But the colonel gasped when he figured up the total. It was $960.

"Great heavens, sah!" he exclaimed to the major. "It is $960. If we pay this we can't get back home. "We might," suggested the major faintly, "we might jump out of this window and run."
"No, san," said the colonel, bring-

A CLEVER DOCTOR.

Rnocked His Opponent Down and Then Charged for Treating Him, From the New York Herold.

A well-known South Brooklyn surgeon was passing along Butler street shortly before midnight, when the sir was suddenly cent by a woman's screams of terror and cries for help. In the fourth stery windows of a tenement house opposite he could see the outlines of struggileg forms.

Dashing into the dark ballway and groping up the stairs, he reached the scene of contention, and found a burly teamster, in a frenzy of intoxication, beating and kicking his wife. The doctor's eye instantly noticed a heavy whip standing at the foot of the sofa. Seizing it and "hefting" it for a moment, he brought the loaded butt down upon the skull of the wife beater. The man who delivered the blow had a thorough knowledge of anatomy; the man who received the blow went down as if a thousand volts of electricity had hit him in the neck.

As soon as the wife saw blood trickling by the husband's car she began to blubber out that he was killed. "Don't be alarmed, my good woman," sald ber visitor. I am Dr. So and So and I'll repair the slight damage I have done."

While he was putting some stitches in the wound he had indicted, the sobing wife explained that her husband was naturally a kind man, but that he had that day won a little money on the races and had become drazed with

When the surgeon brought the man back to consciousness he made the patient hand over $2 for medical services—just to impress the occasion on his memory, he said. The injured man grumbled and protested, but he had to pay.
